

Undergraduate: International Studies

Course Description

The course seeks to expose students to the major international relations, increase students' international consciousness by making them appreciate the way the international system operates; provides those already in policy making and policy implementation positions in state and non-state agencies with the skills and tools necessary to make sound decisions on issues affecting their countries' relations with other units in the international system; Prepare students for careers in international organizations, diplomatic offices and national offices that handle international affairs; Equip students with theoretical and applied knowledge of key issues and approaches in international relations as a specialized field of study and finally prepare students for further academic and career pursuits in the study and conduct of international relations.