

SUSTAINABLE FUTURES FOR THE CARIBBEAN

Critical Interventions and the 2030 agenda

19th SALISES Annual Conference

Holiday Inn Resort Montego Bay, Jamaica April 25-27, 2018

Welcome

From the Minister of Tourism

I am honoured to welcome you to the 19th Annual Conference of the Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES), which is being hosted during an auspicious moment in the history of the University of the West Indies (UWI).

This year the university celebrates 70 years of excellence in leadership and service to the region. I commend the university for its research, which has influenced the policy process in the Caribbean; its significant training of our Caribbean citizens; and consistent social engagement on a variety of public interest and development issues. I also applaud SALISES for choosing a timely theme that addresses the bold and ambitious 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development adopted during the 70th Session of the UN General Assembly. Jamaica was among the 154 countries represented by heads of state or government who adopted the 2030 Agenda, along with the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) that aim to, inter alia, end poverty, protect the planet, and ensure prosperity for all.

This broad-based and multi-disciplinary gathering being led by SALISES to ensure Sustainable Futures for the Caribbean exhorts us to fashion regional and national strategies to complement local and international initiatives so that we can enhance our strengths and resilience as a region. Certainly, as one of the most tourist-dependent regions in the world, the Caribbean's future is inextricably tied to this sector. According to the World Travel and Tourism Council's Economic Impact Report for 2017, in the Caribbean, 13.4% of the population across the region is (directly or indirectly) employed in this sector, which contributes 14.9% of our GDP (Gross Domestic Product). However, climate change, the threat of pandemics, global terrorist attacks, cybercrimes and security risks represent major challenges for this very critical industry. Can the region proactively respond to these risks and economic pressures, engineer innovative strategies and produce critical interventions that can transform the sector, while leaving no one behind?

On Day 3 of the conference we hope to explore these and other questions. The Ministry will lead a plenary dedicated to the examination of the sustainability of the tourism sector and its contribution to the goals of growth; the blue economy; and ensuring sustainable consumption and production patterns – SDG goals 8, 14 and 12. This dialogue, which will advance discussions held during the recent International Conference on Sustainable Tourism (hosted in conjunction with the UN World Tourism Organization and the World Bank in Montego Bay last November), signals Jamaica's continued leadership role in the debate on the sustainability of tourism.

The Honourable Edmund Bartlett, MP. Minister of Tourism Government of Jamaica (GOJ)

From the Vice-Chancellor, UWI

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the 19th Annual SALISES Conference. The significance of this conference cannot be over-emphasised. It takes place 71 years after the 1947 conference held here in Montego Bay at which the British West Indian colonies established a committee to examine the political and economic need for closer association between the Caribbean territories. The conference marked an important tipping point in the history of the region, with nation builders such as Norman Washington Manley arguing vehemently for a unified Caribbean.

Today, over half a century after that conference, the world is now re-evaluating itself and seeking to find ways to ensure prosperity for every citizen. The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) for example, which were agreed upon in 2015, represent a comprehensive framework for countries around the world to develop policies in the best interest of promoting social justice, economic growth and development. They are a call to action for partnerships that will involve governments, the private sector, civil society representatives, the academy, religious organisations and the ordinary man and woman to work towards meaningful and sustained change that can bear fruit for this and future generations.

This conference will examine the Caribbean's prospects for 2030 against the background of the aspirations of the peoples of the region articulated during the 1947 conference and the global goals for sustainable development. It is timely, particularly in light of the University of the West Indies' Strategic Plan for 2017-2022, which focuses on three key points of engagement in our efforts to revitalise Caribbean development: access, alignment and agility. Our plan will help to advance learning, create knowledge and foster innovation to promote positive transformation in the Caribbean and the wider world.

I trust that these next few days will provide an opportunity for rich and fruitful discussion as we put our minds to the task of providing sound leadership for the future. My best wishes to all for a successful and productive session.

Professor Sir Hilary Beckles Vice-Chancellor UWI

From the University Director, SALISES

On behalf of the SALISES Directors, staff and students I welcome you to our 19th annual SALISES conference. We are pleased that the university has recognised the conference as one of its signature events as we celebrate The UWI @ 70. Our conference is being held under the theme "Sustainable Futures for the Caribbean: Critical Interventions for the 2030 Agenda." This theme is in keeping with our research agenda: "Caribbean Prospects for 2030 and the Global Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)." Based on this agenda, SALISES Research Fellows across the three campuses are pursuing three societal themes/concentrations – navigating globalisation; social renewal; and sustainable futures. This conference is therefore of utmost importance to our research and teaching agendas as we continue to impact the policy process in the Caribbean.

SALISES was formed from a merger of the Institute of Social and Economic Research and the Consortium Graduate School of Social Sciences in 1999. Since 2000, our annual conference has been hosted, in rotation, by one of the three SALISES units (St. Augustine, Mona, Cave Hill). This annual forum is considered the number one conference held by the Faculty of Social Sciences.

The location of this year's conference was intentionally chosen so that we could ponder some of the issues that engaged country and colonial representatives in 1947 at a conference for the Closer Association of the British West Indian Colonies, which was held here in Montego Bay. One of the questions that will occupy us during the conference is this: Are these historical concerns still salient in a shift to a global 2030 sustainable development agenda?

We received an overwhelming response to our call for papers and invitation to join us for this historic conference. I know that you will all be intellectually engaged by the various presentations and deliberations, as we seek solutions to our persistent social and economic problems. The successful hosting of this conference will help us to realise our SALISES vision to be an internationally renowned institution for graduate education and research-based solutions in development.

The success of any conference depends on many individuals and agencies. I wish to thank the sponsors for their generous support; the presenters for the quality and depth of their papers; the Programme Committee chaired by Dr Northover, for putting together such a brilliant programme; members of the conference committee and secretariat and all those who have supported the conference in any way.

Welcome to all! I hope that you will enjoy the presentations, have stimulating discussions, forge and renew alliances, debate new ideas, and above all, have a great time with us!

Aldrie Henry-Lee, Professor University Director, SALISES

From the UNDP Resident Representative

The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) extends its congratulations to the University of the West Indies for reaching the signal milestone of 70 years of outstanding contribution to national, regional and global development. This 19th Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES) annual conference and its thematic exploration of Sustainable Futures for the Caribbean based on the 2030 Agenda is a fitting and productive tribute to the university's past, present and future imprint on global development.

We are particularly encouraged by the conference's singular focus on forging a future based on the comprehensive blueprint of the global Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Reviewing the prospects for achievement of the SDGs should identify impediments and opportunities for further accelerating progress towards the 2030 Agenda. The emphasis on advancing a supportive research, policy and political agenda for Caribbean sustainable development will provide important accelerators for the SDG implementation process.

The perspectives of the youth and children will also be critical and I applaud SALISES for ensuring that the views of the younger cohort are considered and help forge a more realistic, effective and empathetic approach to Agenda 2030 implementation.

UNDP's commitment to the region's and Jamaica's achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals is unwavering. This global plan for ending poverty, protecting the planet and ensuring that all people enjoy peace and prosperity is the lens through which UNDP realises its day-to-day mission of empowering lives and making nations more resilient to crises.

We continue to believe that, while the SDGs are ambitious, they are achievable within the remaining timeframe of 12 years. UNDP anticipates that the upcoming discussions will further shape the underpinning research, political and policy framework for action, and as such we look forward to supporting viable and promising proposals that will uphold the global 2030 Agenda commitment to 'Leave No One Behind'.

Bruno Pouezat

UN Resident Coordinator and UNDP Resident Representative for Jamaica, the Bahamas, Bermuda, Turks and Caicos and the Cayman Islands

From the Director, ECLAC Subregional Headquarters for the Caribbean

The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) is pleased to partner with the Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES) in organising the 19th SALISES annual conference under the theme of "Sustainable Futures for the Caribbean: Critical Interventions and the 2030 Agenda."

ECLAC is actively assisting countries of the Caribbean in establishing institutional mechanisms for long-term sustainable development planning and strengthening statistical capacities for evidence-based policy planning and implementation. These are two critical interventions designed to promote the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and facilitate the follow-up and review of the 2030 Agenda in the Caribbean.

I welcome the opportunity that this conference provides to engage academics, researchers and thematic experts on these and other critical interventions that could foster sustainable futures for the Caribbean with the promise to leave no one behind.

Diane Quarless
Director
Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC)
Subregional Headquarters for the Caribbean

From the Vice-President (Operations), Caribbean Development Bank

The Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) is pleased to partner with the Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES) for its 19th Annual Conference. This year's event is being presented under the theme, "Sustainable Futures for the Caribbean: Critical Interventions and the 2030 Agenda", which in many respects aligns with the CDB's ongoing work to invest in and support the region's achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals.

This conference takes place against the backdrop of an uncertain global environment. Political and economic turbulence, represented in part by a post-BREXIT era and an ambiguous political climate in the United States of America, have the potential to derail the tentative return to growth that some of the CDB's borrowing member countries are experiencing.

Notably also, the devastating 2017 Atlantic hurricane season, which left some islands with a major reconstruction bill, has given all of us in the Caribbean much to think about, as we consider how best to withstand the increasing effects of climate change.

A sustainable Caribbean future then may depend on the region's willingness to work together to tackle the pressing challenges that our countries face. Through our support of this conference, the CDB aims to support dialogue and collaboration around the issues of sustainable development and regional integration and cooperation.

This year, as the University of the West Indies celebrates its 70th anniversary, it stands out as a shining example of what is possible through regional cooperation. The university has made significant contributions to research in several fields; produced many notable Caribbean leaders; and transformed our region over the decades.

SALISES, with this conference, is continuing the rich tradition of providing an opportunity for attendees to reflect on and critically evaluate Caribbean development. It is our hope that this event will spark innovative ideas and recommendations, which can drive sustainable social and economic growth for every Caribbean nation by 2030.

On behalf of the CDB, I wish you all a productive conference and reaffirm the bank's commitment to securing a sustainable future for our region.

Monica La Bennett Vice-President (Operations) Caribbean Development Bank

From the Conference Programme Chair, SALISES, UWI, Mona

Greetings, masses! It is with deep pleasure that I welcome you all on behalf of the Conference Programme Committee to our annual conference. This year we also celebrate the University's 70th Anniversary: 70 years of Leadership; 70 Year of Service. We hope that we have succeeded in pulling together a high-quality multi-disciplinary gathering to engage with the fundamental and urgent issues facing the Caribbean.

Our conference will tackle the thorny and entangled issues of politics, society and economy, guided by the themes of Foresighting Integration Dynamics, Future Earth, Leaving no one behind and Sustainable, Meaningful, and Aligned with Radical Transformational (SMART) Growth. We anticipate that we will craft out of this critical intervention approaches that will articulate a triple A strategy. That is, one in line with the University's mission to be Accessible, Agile and Aligned to regional and global imperatives, as we push for a process of reimagining Integration, radical Inclusiveness and sustainable Innovation to reach our Agenda 2030 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and beyond!

I wish to thank you all for deciding to be here with us over these three full, and potentially gamechanging, days. None of this would have been possible without your research efforts, as well as social and political investments for sustainable Caribbean futures. The ground on which we stand has been secured through a collective enterprise, reflecting the diverse contributions of our SALISES Fellows, staff, students and our hard-working Directors. We are deeply indebted to the commitment and tremendous work of our Conference Secretariat team, their diligent attention to the many details and tasks related to hosting this conference; to our sponsors and collaborators in the United Nations system – the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean - for their financial, scholarly and technical support; to our hosts here in beautiful Montego Bay, the Holiday Inn Resort, for their professionalism and hospitality; and to our many chairs, speakers and panellists at this conference. Special thanks to our Minister of Tourism for lending his powerful presence to this event, to the Caribbean Development Bank; the Pro Vice Chancellor of Graduate Studies and Research; and the Jamaica National Group for their generous support; to Dr Claire Nelson and the Deputy Principal, Mona, for supporting our cause; to our Distinguished Sir Arthur Lewis Lecturer, Prof. Melissa Leach, for solidarity in seeking Sustainable Futures for the region; and finally to our Vice Chancellor, whose vision, energy and determination seem unbounded.

It is my sincere hope that together we can help create the future that the region's peoples and all humanity have a right to.... #Fiwifuture

WHO ARE WE?

The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) is one of the five regional Commissions of the United Nations, founded in 1948 to contribute to the region's economic and social development.

OUR MISSION

ECLAC subregional headquarters for the Caribbean's mission is to deepen the understanding of the development challenges of the Caribbean, and to contribute to solutions by conducting research and analysis and providing sound policy advice and technical assistance while focussing on growth.

Through Studies, Technical Assistance, Symposia, and Intergovernmental meetings, ECLAC creates knowledge that shapes policies and programmes in the following areas:

- ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
- SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT
- DISASTER ASSESSMENT
- SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT
- STATISTICS
- KNOWLEDGE MANAGEMENT

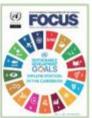

ECLAC serves as the Secretariat of the Forum of the Countries of Latin America and the Caribbean on Sustainable Development. Our support to Member States in their implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) focuses on:

- Design and Implementation of National Institutional Framework for SDG implementation.
- Promotion of evidence-based processes in National Development Planning
- Capacity Strengthening of National Statistical Systems to produce data for the SDG indicators

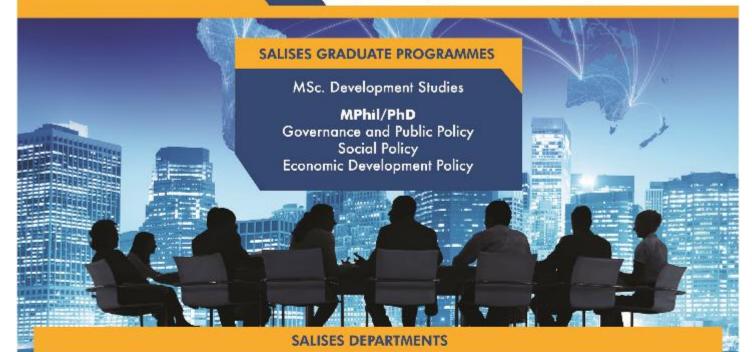

70 years of Service, 70 years of Leadership

Influencing development through high quality graduate teaching and research

DEREK GORDON DATABANK

The mandate of the Databank is to acquire raw numerical data from the Caribbean region, to facilitate social policy analysis. In addition the Databank provides an archival function for Caribbean data. The Databank has a wide collection of datasets, especially from Jamaica. Most of the datasets are from government agencies but the Databank also welcomes datasets from other organizations/researchers.

PUBLICATIONS UNIT

Social and Economic Studies (ISSN) 0037-7651) is a quarterly, peer-reviewed journal that has been published continuously since 1953. Produced by the Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES), it features articles reflecting current academic research of a developmental nature on a wide range of issues in the Caribbean, Latin America and the rest of the Global South

NORMAN GIRVAN DOCUMENTATION CENTRE

The Norman Girvan Documentation Centre is the information core of the Institute. It is a specialised information centre whose main objective is to provide documentation and data facilities for researchers and practitioners in development-oriented activities and to improve the capabilities for solving Caribbean development problems.
